PHOTOS IN USE 2020

2020 has of course been a very strange year, and a year when photography - particularly event photography - has seen reduced opportunities. For example, the Greenbelt festival that I would have normally shot was cancelled, as were many other occasions, and we had no holidays away this year.

But, looking back, there have still been a surprising number of opportunities - some before lockdown - as well as some covid-related projects such as Active Ipswich. I've enjoyed remembering the past year through this collection.

ACTIVE IPSWICH PORTRAITS

This collection of portrait photos was taken outside my house on Picton Avenue in Ipswich. The pictures capture people out exercising, in whatever ways they were doing this - jogging, walking with family, exercising the dog, etc. The project aimed to show a small part of Ipswich life during the 2020 Covid pandemic. I took around 40 portraits, which were then published in the Ipswich Star and East Anglia Daily Times.

YOUR CAMPAIGNING HAS MADE A DIFFERENCE. BIG SHIFT CAMPAIGN VICTORIES

A guest blog from our partner Christian Aid on the effects of our campaigning together over a few years...

The launch of the Big Shift at Greenbelt

A few years ago, Christian Aid and Greenbelt launched the Big Shift campaign, calling on banks to stop financing fossil fuels and to use their considerable financial clout to fund the shift towards renewable energy.

Maybe you were at the festival that year, attended a campaign workshop, signed a petition or had a chat with our campaigns volunteers (pictured below).

Maybe you've wondered what happened with the campaign, and what progress has been made. Well, during these challenging times, we're delighted to share some of our thoughts.

We rarely see the impacts of our activism in the immediate aftermath, sometimes it takes months, years or even decades to fully realise the impact of our collective actions.

Rebecca Solnit has written eloquently about this and the importance of never giving up hope.

Churches in Ipswich enjoy the Bible in music and art

Published by Keith Morris at March 13, 2020

Churches Together in Ipswich gathered for an event called "Enjoy the Bible - Sensing the Sacred Through Music and Art" on Saturday March 7, as part of the God Who Speaks initiative, reports Fr Alan Hodgson.

Archdeacons are appointed to support both the bishops in their work of oversight across the diocese and to support the parishes, benefices and deaneries in their work of mission and ministry. They are members of the Bishop's Staff team, playing their part in shaping the wider strategic vision for the diocese, while relating this to the local realities and concerns of the moment.

Sunday School

We love having children and young people at St Thomas' Church! During our 10am Sung Eucharist service we have a Sunday school for ages 0-16, run by a small team of dedicated teachers. The children have a Bible story, prayer, and a chance to do some craft and colouring. The Sunday school then re-joins the adults in time to receive the bread and wine at communion, or a prayer of blessing. Then there is a chance to show and tell everybody else what they've been learning about!

St Thomas Church, Ipswich, used a variety of photos from a service on their website.
