Queen of the Revolution

She now laughs at the words they used to use to describe her—rebellious, belligerent, defiant, unruly, stubborn. For a period of time, it seemed to be the consensus of opinions from everyone who ever held a position of authority over her.

She didn't see the humour back then. Little did anyone know that tucked away beneath that tough image she portrayed was the most tender, sensitive young soul. Little did they know that the sharpness of her tongue was simply her weapon of choice to protect the fragility of her heart. She wasn't trying to be an insurgent. She just saw things differently. Never feeling like she ever fit in. Always longing to find her place in the world. Always feeling like she needed to defend herself. Always fighting to be heard, to be understood.

She spent years resisting the grips of those who believed she could be stuffed into any variety of boxes—none of which she would ever fit. She knew it all along. Yet others were always pretending that they knew the dreams for her future better than she did—if only she would follow the road map they had already prepared for her. Others always attempting to force their perspectives upon her and demanding that she accept those views as her own—as though their thoughts outweighed her instincts.

You see, she wasn't looking for the easy way, she was looking for HER way. Easy sounded too much like giving up, giving in.

She sensed something huge for her future. She just couldn't find the page number in the index of any of those vocation books.

So she broke rules. She broke chains. She broke into uncharted territory. She shattered everyone else's expectations and used the shards of those notions to build the mosaic empire that SHE wanted. In doing so, she found a tribe of women just like her. They followed her. They believed in her. They both looked up to her as well as supported her. Now only she defines what success means for her life.

You too are the Queen of the Revolution! Settle for nothing less than that which lights your soul on fire. Go forth and break ground! Be fearless. Be brave enough to walk alone.

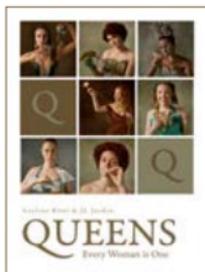

Let your desires burn!

And when you find the passion of your very own soul, light this whole damn world on fire!!

QUEENS

Every Woman is One

As women, we all feel like we have a hundred hats to wear in a day, a magnitude of thoughts to process every moment, and the weight of everyone else's needs and expectations upon our shoulders. In the midst of being there for everyone else, it's easy to lose yourself, to feel isolated and all alone. Embrace those moments, but be sure that they are temporary.

Stand tall. Know that every answer you seek is at the core of who you are.

May our book give you the strength, hope, and reassurance that you are not alone, that we are all connected, and most of all that you are all you will ever need to achieve your greatest dreams and aspirations.

In every moment... YOU ARE A QUEEN!
